

Glow Beauty

Impact Report

Prepared Mr. Ahmed Wael

17 May

By

2025

What's Inside

This report delivers an in-depth performance analysis focused on the cost-efficiency of customer acquisition strategies across key digital advertising channels. Specifically, it examines and compares the Cost Per Acquisition (CPA) metrics between influencer-driven campaigns and direct advertising.

The analysis is further refined through seasonal segmentation (Winter and Spring) and customer type classification (New vs Returning), offering granular insight into how each strategy performs under varying conditions. The findings are intended to guide future media planning, campaign budgeting, and audience targeting decisions with a data-driven approach.

Tracking New Client Bookings Over the Campaign Period

Objective: To analyze trends in new client bookings across the four-month campaign period (January to April) and identify fluctuations in engagement by service category.

1. Overall New Client Bookings

Month	Total Bookings
Jan	16,165
Feb	16,784
Mar	14,549
Apr	16,166

Insight: New client bookings peaked in February and recovered in April after a noticeable dip in March. This trend may reflect external factors such as seasonal spending behaviors or the impact of concurrent marketing efforts.

2. Bookings by Service Category

Coloring:

Month	Bookings
Jan	4,806
Feb	4,373
Mar	4,423
Apr	3,636

Observation: Coloring bookings showed a slight downward trend overall, with a significant dip in April.

Facial

Month	Bookings
Jan	3,673
Feb	4,211
Mar	2,721
Apr	4,426

Observation: Facial services dipped sharply in March but saw a strong recovery in April, making it a volatile yet responsive service category.

Haircut

Month	Bookings
Jan	4,337
Feb	4,026
Mar	3,497
Apr	4,237

Observation: Haircut bookings experienced a dip in March followed by a partial rebound, indicating moderate stability.

Manicure

Month	Bookings
Jan	3,349
Feb	4,174
Mar	3,908
Apr	3,867

Observation: Manicure bookings remained relatively stable with only slight month-to-month fluctuations.

3. Key Insights & Conclusion

-  February saw the highest volume of new client bookings, highlighting its importance for future campaigns.
-  March marked the weakest period across most service categories, suggesting a need for mid-campaign reinforcements.
-  Facial services rebounded sharply after March, showing potential responsiveness to targeted promotions.
-  Coloring services declined steadily, indicating a potential shift in demand or saturation.